Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Saturday 06 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rain clearing, then much colder with snow in the east.

This Evening and Tonight:
Bands of rain and hill snow across central areas moving south, followed by occasional snow showers into eastern areas and then more persistent snow over south-eastern parts of England later. Windy with coastal gales in the east.

Sunday:
Heavy snow across parts of east and south-east England, with strong winds causing significant wind chill and drifting of lying snow. Elsewhere, some sunny intervals, snow showers in the east.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Remaining very cold with further snow showers mainly affecting eastern areas, but possibly the southwest at times. Strong easterly winds will give a significant wind chill. Harsh frosts overnight.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.